GIVE STATION TO COUNTY FARMERS

Appeal to Public Service Commission Successful. Peach Glen to be Name of Post Office Likely to be Established there.

The Gettysburg and Harrisburg Railroad Company has notified the Public Service Commission that they will comply with the request of W. S. Adams and about seventy other residents of Mount Tabor and vicinity to establish a new freight and passenger depot for their accommodation. It is expected that the Post Office Department will establish an office at the same place, to be known as Peach Glen.

The railroad company went a step further than Mr. Adams and the other residents of that section asked. Mr. Adams agreed to allow the use of his own warehouse and to provide facilities and men for handling the freight for a period of eighteen months if the company would agree to have the place as a freight and passenger stop. The railroad has declined this offer, and will erect, equip and man their own station.

The place will be a regular freight stop and will be a flag station for passenger traffic.

The request for the service was made some time ago and was refused whereupon an appeal was taken to the Public Service Commission and the case was heard by that body on June 15th, John D. Keith, Esq. representing Mr. Adams and the others concerned. The action of the Reading follows this hearing.

The new station will be at a point about one-half mile from Starners station, and a mile and a quarter from Idaville. It will be called Mount Tabor and located about a half mile from that village. Mr. Adams recently established a warehouse at this point and a direct road from Mount Tabor to the railroad will give easy access and save the farmers and fruit growers many miles, both in hauling freight and in using the station for passenger traffic.

BRYSONIA

Brysonia—Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Boserman and Mrs. Kate Sunday, and Mr. and Mrs. Phillips and son, Guy, visited C. S. Boserman and family recently.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Taylor and two daughters, Miriam and Helen, of Gettysburg; Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Warren and daughter, Eveline, of Pleasant Dale; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hockey, of near Gettysburg; Herman and Alton Wierman, of Arendtsville, spent Sunday with S. J. Taylor and family. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Miller and son, Johnson, of New Oxford; Anna and Reginald Malone, of Hanover; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Spangler, and three sons, Lewis, Cameron and Paul, and Miss Fanny Bushey and Master Feiser, of East Berlin, spent Sunday evening at the home of Clayton Boserman.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Knouse, Mr. and Mrs. George Fohl, Mr. and Mrs. Alvis Minter and Ernest Trostel, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Lupp and daughter, Ada, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Hoffman, motored to the Loysville Orphans' Home last Thursday.

Mrs. Elmira Funt is still very ill. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wirt and three children, of near Arendtsville, visited Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Thomas Sunday afternoon.

Harry Taylor, of Centre Mills, was a recent visitor at the home of C. S. Boserman.

M. E. Knouse took Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Knouse to Shippensburg last Tuesday to attend the commencement.

Miss Isabel Taylor has returned home from Shippensburg.

MANY ADDITIONAL CEMETERY LOTS

Extension of Evergreen Cemetery will Meet Needs of the Town for Many Years to Come. Will Try to Save Woods on the West.

Twenty two hundred additional lots are shown on the blueprints of the proposed extension of Evergreen Cemetery which have been prepared. The cemetery association met on Thursday evening and re-elected the former officers, R. William Bream continuing as president, and J. W. Kendeheart as secretary and treasurer. The present cemetery contains 2800 lots, but about 600 of these are plotted in the woods on the west side which, it is the plan of the directors, is never to be cut down unless there should come a time when no other land would be available. The new addition will, accordingly, be the same size as the present cemetery.

The association has decided not to offer for sale any of the lots in the addition until all those in the original cemetery have been disposed of, and a number of these still remain untaken.

Two hundred blueprints of the addition have been prepared and show an attractive arrangement for the entrances and driveways, together with the other plans for the lots and general scheme of the place.

APPROVE OF PRESIDENT

Wilson Day Observed by Hanover with Exercises.

Hanover observed "Wilson Day" on Thursday evening, in accordance with resolutions passed by the borough council. The citizens congregated in Centre square and held patriotic exercises in which Major Jenkins Post, Grand Army of the Republic; Patriotic Order Sons of America, uniformed rank of Knights Pythias, Boy Scouts and other organizations, together with several bands, participated.

Chief Burgess Henry M. Stokes presided and addresses were delivered by Andrew R. Brodbeck and John J. Bollinger.

The President's course since the outbreak of the European war and his notes to Germany were heartily approved and the demonstration showed that the people of the community are standing back of their Chief Executive.

WOULD PERVERT TETANUS TROUBLE

Free Antitoxin to Save our People from Serious Developments Following Fourth of July Injuries. The State Leads.

As a protection to persons who may suffer injuries with fireworks, and through them be in danger of lockjaw, free tetanus antitoxin will be furnished Adams County persons with others through the State, during the Independence Day season.

Pennsylvania for the past four years has had a larger toll of accidents resulting from Fourth of July celebrations than any other State. In 1914 more than twenty-five per cent of all the accidents which occurred on the Fourth of July, were in this State.

In order that such accidents as occur may not be followed by deaths from tetanus or lockjaw, as it is commonly known; Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, Commissioner of Health, has made arrangements for the State-wide distribution of tetanus antitoxin. This will be furnished without cost to the poor.

It is essential that tetanus antitoxin be administered within twenty four hours after the wound has been received. Any physician can secure immunizing doses of 1500 units upon application if he will certify that it is for the treatment of persons too poor to pay.

Dr. Dixon urges the prompt use of antitoxin to prevent lockjaw following explosive or other wounds. He says:—

"Do not consider any such wounds trivial, send for the physician at once. If it is impossible to promptly secure his attendance, wash out the wound thoroughly with boiled water, using it as hot as can be borne; remove every particle of foreign matter and until the Doctor arrives apply wet cloths saturated with a solution made by adding a teaspoonful of salt to a pint of boiled water."

ARSENIC DID DAMAGE

Peach Growers Kill Trees Fighting Pests with Poison.

Hundreds of peach trees in commercial orchards through the Cumberland Valley have been killed by arsenical poisoning, according to a report issued by Professors J. F. Adams and E. N. Fagan, of Pennsylvania State College. Observations made by them throughout the affected districts indicated that the peach growers had injured their trees by heavy applications of lime-sulphur and arsenate of lead for the purpose of controlling the peach tree borer, a grub worm that damages healthy trees by girdling the trunk close to the surface of the ground.

Reports of peach tree injury came to the college. The investigators went into the orchards and found the bark was dying around the collar of the tree, and in some cases it extended to the branches. Professor Fagan said the symptoms were a slight raising of the bark surrounded by a depressed area, giving the affected parts a wavy appearance. The bark is extremely tough and leathery, adhering tightly to the wood of the tree, with the cambium, or growing tissue, dead.

Chemical analysis was made and in all cases of trees treated for borers, an excessive amount of arsenic was evident, said Mr. Fagan. This injury was further observed to be restricted to the treated parts of the trees. Field experiments have been started in the college orchard to further check these observations. The fruit experts advise all peach growers to discontinue the use of lead arsenate in connection with lime-sulphur for borer control.

SIX KILLED IN RAILROAD CRASH

Two Trains Meet Head on Near Thurmont. Fatal Accident on Railroad Trestle. Woman and Son on Way to Sanitarium Killed.

The Blue Mountain Express, bound from Baltimore, and an accommodation train from Hagerstown for Baltimore, known as No. 10, both of the Western Maryland Railway, collided, head-on, on the bridge west of Thurmont, at 6 o'clock Thursday evening.

Six persons were killed, four of whom were employees of the railroad. Several were injured and nearly all of the many passengers on the trains were badly shaken up.

The dead are: Coleman Cook, engineer; Luther Hull, fireman; G. R. Fritz, traveling fireman; J. R. Hayes, fireman; Mrs. W. C. Chipchase, Baltimore; Walter Chipchase, Baltimore.

The accident was due to the inability of the train dispatcher at Hagerstown to get the proper signals through to the trains because of the wires being down due to the storm of Tuesday afternoon. It is presumed that the engineers of both trains believed the other had been ordered to take the siding to allow his train to pass. The trains were traveling at a fairly rapid rate of speed at the time of the collision and the crash was terrific. Were it not for the fact that the trains were made up of all-steel cars the loss of life would have been larger, as many persons travel on the Blue Mountain Express.

The trains met on the bridge just west of Thurmont, and the tank and the baggage car of the Blue Mountain Express in which Mrs. Chipchase and her son were traveling were torn from the rest of the train and hurled from the bridge into the ravine 50 feet below.

Thurmont is at the foot of the mountain, and the scene of the accident was at a point where the trains begin their climb. There is only a single track along this entire route and because of the mountainous country there are many curves. In fact, there are two curves on the bridge. Were there a long stretch of straight track it would have been possible for the engineers to have seen the approaching trains and to have averted the collision.

Mrs. Chipchase was to have been admitted to a sanatorium. Because of her infirmity she preferred to recline in the baggage car, where special arrangements had been made for her and by her side was her son and a nurse. Until a few minutes before the crash the nurse had been seated by her side and left to stroll through the train. Thus she probably escaped death.

It is believed that Mrs. Chipchase was killed instantaneously. The baggage car and the tank crumpled up and leaped from between the engine and the rest of the train, and when persons reached the wreckage in the small stream in the ravine below the body of the invalid was lifeless. The son lay by her side groaning and unconscious.

The special car of President Carl R. Gray, of the railway, was on the Blue Mountain Express, and several leading officials of the road, among whom was E. T. Stewart, the general passenger agent, were on board.

STOLEN WOOL WAS DESTROYED

Emmitsburg Worked up over its Latest Criminal Case. Two Persons in Jail on Account of Theft. Now Awaiting Trial.

The theft of six bags of wool, valued at $6 a bag, is the cause of Ellen and Albert Beatty, colored, awaiting trial. At the same time, the town of Emmitsburg, where the theft is alleged to have occurred, is much wrought up over the disturbance, and all that remains of the wool are the "charred remains."

It was after ex-Sheriff Albert Patterson had missed the wool from his premises that an investigation was made and clues were found which led to the arrest of the Beattys by Deputy Sheriff Adelsberger, of Emmitsburg. When they were taken before Magistrate Shuff, at Emmitsburg, he concluded there was sufficient evidence to hold both, and consequently $300 bail was placed on the one and $200 bail on the other. Neither of the Beattys could see their way clear to come across with the bond, so they are guests of Frederick county.

At the jail Sheriff Conard and the deputies put the two Beattys "through it" in an effort to learn more facts about the theft. The younger Beatty, who is about 25 years of age, and an adopted son of the Beatty woman, who is about 60 or 65, maintained silence. The woman, however, was slightly more voluble, and said she found the wool in her cellar and thinking no one would see it if it were burned, she decided to follow that course. Hence, the wool was burned.

In Emmitsburg, according to reports coming from that place, people are somewhat excited over the affair, and are wondering what is going to happen next. And in the meantime the Beattys will enjoy a vacation, unless some one comes to their rescue with the necessary bail.

APPEAR AGAIN

Gypsies are in this Section once More.

Gypsies once more are in this section. A gypsy man, accompanied by his wife and a grown daughter, appeared in Hagerstown and asked a license to ply their trade in Washington county. When informed that the cost of the license is $50, with an additional fee of 50 cents for the clerk, the man argued for a reduction, that he had one wagon, that he could scarcely support his family, etc. Deputy Clerk Gilbert said the license was $50, and that he would pay or nothing. The man went out without his license. He stated he had six children. He stated that he was from Serbia and he carried papers showing that he had traveled over a considerable portion of the United States. The two women with him were dressed in the brightest of colors, and wore plenty of silk and were evidently of the better class of gypsies.

Gypsies in this county are very rare now, as the Legislature some years ago fixed the license fee of $50 for travel through the county, upon gypsies who sought to ply their trade here. It is understood that they can pass through the county, but they cannot stop, tell fortunes, horse trade and do the many other things gypsies resort to in order to win a livelihood.

Prior to the enactment of this law, gypsies by the scores visited Adams county each summer, and in many communities they constituted a nuisance remaining so long as persons were willing to give to them. In many cases they secured provisions by threats, and often times by fear persons were induced to give to them.

AT ANNIVERSARY

President of the College Attends Celebration at Allegheny College.

Dr. W. A. Granville returned on Thursday evening from Meadville where he attended the exercises incident to the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Allegheny College. An elaborate pageant, and the laying of a cornerstone for the new chemical laboratory, were included in the program.

GERMANS FIGHT RUSS FIERCELY

Teutons Cross Dniester and Attack Enemy.

LEMBERG VALIANTLY DEFENDED

Report Muscovites Retreating Farther North and Capture of Village in Russian Poland.

Berlin, June 25.—A further victory for the Austro-German forces in Galicia was announced at army headquarters here.

The army of General von Linsingen, which has been meeting with stubborn opposition from the Russians along the Dniester river front, has succeeded in crossing the river. The statement says: "The army under General von Linsingen crossed the Dniester between Halicz, which is still being held by our enemies, and Zurawno. This army engaged in a fierce battle on the northern bank.

"In the neighborhood of Lemberg and Zolkow the pursuit continues. Between Rawa Ruska and the San, as far as Ulanow, nothing of importance has occurred. In the angle between the San and the Vistula the Russians have retreated behind a branch of the San; also on the left bank of the Vistula south of Itza they are retreating towards the north.

"Northeast of Kursk (province of Kovno) the Russians left more than 100 prisoners in our hands after an attack which we repulsed. On the Omuie river (Russian Poland) the German advance resulted in the capture of the village of Kopaczyska. South of the Vistula in Poland several enemy attacks were frustrated."

Details of the taking of Lemberg (which fell on Tuesday), while still meager, show that the Russian troops put up a strong resistance to the very last, in spite of the fact that their situation was hopeless.

Before the city fell the armies under General von Mackensen and Archduke Joseph Ferdinand (of Austria) had driven wedges deep into the northern section of the Russian line even as far as Tanew, cutting this line into two detached parts. Under pressure from the northwest, and following an especially effective artillery bombardment by the army of General Boehm-Ermolli, the archduke completed the disaster by breaking the Russian center, which was supported on Lemberg.

At the same time General von Mackensen pressed steadily on the soldiers of Emperor Nicholas, who were in full retreat along the line from Lemberg to Rawa Ruska. General Boehm-Ermolli assumed the pursuit of the enemy to the northeast and east of Lemberg.

As soon as the investment of Lemberg had been completed, according to the dispatches reaching Berlin, the Russians, threatened by the further advance of the Germans and the Austro-Hungarians, also began retreat from the angle in northern Galicia formed by the rivers San and Vistula, a section of territory which lies to the northwest of Przemyśl, as well as from the district around Klecie, in Russian Poland, about 100 miles to the south of Warsaw.

LOVER DEAD, GIRL DYING

Double Shooting Occurs During Visit of Just Enlisted Naval Recruit.

Kittanning, Pa., June 25.—Samuel Olinger, aged twenty years, is dead, and his eighteen-year-old sweetheart, Estella Wood, of Applewood, near here, is at her home in a critical condition as the result of a shooting in the Wood home.

Mrs. Herbert Wood, the girl's mother, said she was awakened by the firing of two shots. She hurried downstairs and upon entering the parlor discovered Olinger lying dead on the floor, with a bullet wound in his head. The girl, a short distance away, with a bullet wound in the right eye, was unconscious.

A physician was summoned for the girl. She is expected to die. There had been no known trouble between the couple.

Olinger, it was learned, had enlisted in the United States navy at Pittsburgh on Wednesday.

Woman Falls From Cherry Tree.

Phoenixville, Pa., June 25.—Falling from a cherry tree where she had been picking cherries, Mrs. S. Hallman, of Royersford, is now lying in the Phoenixville hospital suffering with a compound fracture of the shoulder and serious internal injuries. At the hospital grave doubts of her recovery are felt.

Killed Saving Another.

Johnstown, Pa., June 25.—When Louis Siders, a foreign miner, came in contact with a live wire in the Pretoria mine, near Holsopple, J. B. Kirkpatrick, mine foreman, attempted his rescue and received the full force of the shock, dying a short time later. Siders was not badly hurt.

JAMES M. THOMPSON.

New Orleans Editor Who Will Wed Miss Clark.

Speaker Champ Clark has under consideration a plan by which he will perpetuate the wedding of his daughter, Genevieve, for the future Clark generations to see. He is planning to have motion pictures of the wedding taken, but not for exhibition purposes. He will purchase the film and lay it away in his library, and whenever he wants to see the Clark-Thompson wedding over again he will haul out the film and run it off on a screen in his home. Speaker Clark has "set his foot down," as his daughter expressed it, on having any moving picture of the wedding taken for exhibition purposes. He said he "didn't propose to have the wedding made a circus of" by permitting pictures to be shown in theaters after it was over. But he has expressed a desire—at least Miss Genevieve has—to have a film of the wedding for family use.

367,000 IN PENNA. ARE NOT CITIZENS

Problem of Foreign-Born Resident is Discussed.

Philadelphia, June 25.—A movement to make citizens of every foreign born resident of Pennsylvania who has attained his majority and is of a mental and moral caliber suitable to become such, and to educate him before accepting him into citizenship, so that he will have some real grasp of what this country stands for, what are its ideals and what is really meant by "home," was started at a round table luncheon held at the Union League by a number of prominent educators, government naturalization officials and others interested in the proposition.

After a comprehensive review of the situation by half a dozen speakers, it was decided that more and better "team work" between the naturalization courts and the boards of education, city, state and national, was needed in order to make better citizens out of those seeking that privilege.

A resolution was adopted suggesting that the Public Education association take the whole proposition under consideration and endeavor to frame a plan that would bring about the desired end.

In explaining the object of the conference, Charles T. Walker, of the Social Service House, and a widely known social worker, who presided, stated that 367,000 odd of the 615,000 foreign born residents of Pennsylvania were not naturalized and pointed out that these men were not an asset of the state, taking no active part in the life of the community and not having the welfare of the country, as a whole, at all at heart.

Reading Wins Convention.

Stroudsburg, Pa., June 25.—There was a spirited contest for the 1916 session of the Pennsylvania Pharmaceutical association, Reading winning over Philadelphia, Connetquot Lake and Forest Park. The association went on record as opposing schemes to attract business by giving something for nothing, taking the position that the public was compelled to pay just the same.

BRITAIN DEFENDS SEIZING CARGOES

Claim Blockade Has Been Considerate of U. S. Trade.

THE REPLY IS FRIENDLY

Intimates England Is Doing More For America Regarding German Commerce Than For Any Other Nation.

Washington, June 25.—The memorandum of the British government in regard to the enforcement of its orders in council as affecting American trade was made public here.

In this memorandum, which was handed by Lord Crewe to Ambassador Page in London, Great Britain again gives impressive evidence of her desire to make every possible concession to the United States without actually endangering her blockade of Germany.

The memorandum is framed in the friendliest spirit. In fact it contains the distinct intimation that Great Britain is doing more for the United States in the way of lightening the burden caused by the British blockade than she is doing for any other nation.

Notwithstanding these protestations Great Britain's memorandum in no way alters her determination to continue the blockade. This latest British communication, in the opinion of Washington officials, concedes to the protest of the United States against violations of the principles of international law in the conduct of the British blockade.

The memorandum, so far as the vital issues between this government and Great Britain are concerned, leaves the situation exactly where it was, except that Great Britain has laid before this country the details of what she has done to make the burden upon the United States as light as possible.

The note also says: "Importers in the United States, having now had three months in which to clear off their purchases in enemy territory, his majesty's government trust that, in presence of circumstances enumerated, the United States government will acknowledge the great consideration which has been shown to American interests."

The receipt of the British memorandum probably will not alter the determination of President Wilson and his advisers to send a strong protest to Great Britain against her interference with American non-contraband with and from the ports of neutral countries adjacent to Germany.

As viewed by officials the benefits and favors set forth by Great Britain in the memorandum as acts of grace on her part fall far short of the rights which the United States has under the rules of international law.

SEIZE TWO U. S. SHIPS

British Haul Neches and Pioneer Into Prize Court.

London, June 25.—The American steamship Neches has been seized in the Downs and ordered to proceed to London to discharge her general cargo, which is to be thrown into the prize court.

The contention of the British government that the cargo came from a country hostile to Great Britain is denied by the shippers.

The cargo of the Neches was loaded at Rotterdam and the vessel was on her way to New York when she was seized. The shippers maintain that the cargo is of Belgian origin.

A dispatch from Alexandria, Egypt, to Lloyd's says a prize court writ has been issued against the American steamship Gargolye.

The American oil tank steamship Pioneer, which sailed from New York on June 3 for Copenhagen, has been taken into Kirkwall so that her cargo may be examined for contraband.

WARN U. S. WAR PARTY

Munich Paper Says Submarine Trip Should Make Us "Think Twice."

London, June 25.—The correspondent at The Hague of the Exchange Telegraph company transmits a telegram received there from Munich, concerning an article published by the Neueste Nachrichten, of Munich, commenting on the voyage of a German submarine from Wilhelmshaven to the Dardanelles.

This paper points out that the distance from Bremen to New York is only 3600 miles, and expresses the hope that this submarine exploit "will make the war party in the United States think twice."

CARRANZA DEFIES WARNING OF U. S.

His Reply Banishes Hope of Peaceful Settlement.

Washington, June 25.—Official hope that the heads of the warring military factions in Mexico would settle their differences has waned.

General Carranza's notice to the United States, reiterating that he would not agree to a truce with General Villa pending a discussion of peace, was responsible. He announces his intention of continuing his military campaign to crush his adversaries.

General Carranza has all along declined to accept Villa's peace overtures, as well as suggestions of foreign mediation in Mexico's internal troubles.

Possibility, however, that Carranza does not understand the earnestness of the United States in demanding restoration of peace in Mexico is recognized by officials. Carranza probably soon will be told that before he can hope for the moral support of the United States he must adopt a conciliatory attitude toward his opponents.

It is believed that this may be the object of the mission of Charles A. Douglas and Eliseo Arredondo, the Washington representatives of Carranza, who left to confer with him.

Carranza announces that he soon will dominate the situation and grant amnesty to those not guilty of crime. He says Villa and his associates must either leave the country or be tried by a military court.

BISHOP AND 3 PRIESTS SLAIN

Carranza Troops Loot and Kill at College at Tlaxcala.

El Paso, Tex., June 25.—Bishop Candana, aged eighty-five, of the College of Nuestra, Sonora de Ocatlan, at Tlaxcala, and three priests were killed on June 1 by Carranza troops commanded by General Francisco Cos, according to a letter received here.

The letter says that the troops then looted and destroyed the college. The priests killed were Father Quiroz, Father Bazan and Father Lara, founder of the orphanage at Ocatlan.

DROP ANOTHER BY SINGLE RUN

Gettysburg Makes Frederick Use
Two Pitchers but Cannot Get Decision over the Leaders. Patriots also Work Two.

Another game was dropped by the narrow margin of one run to Frederick Thursday and the Patriots still hold undisputed possession of last place. Seven to six was the score after nine innings of hard hitting on both sides, two pitchers being used by each manager.

Frederick started the scoring and got runs in the second and third innings. Gettysburg's heavy hitters came across in the fourth and, with errors by the Marylanders, succeeded in running up a quartet of tallies. Frederick evened things up in her half, and so the game saw-sawed back and forth, the Marylanders taking the lead in the sixth and both teams getting runs in the eighth.

In Gettysburg's big inning—the fourth—Hall reached first on Boyne's error, stole second and scored on Mahaffie's double. Miller's hit scored Mahaffie, and Bigler scored Miller. Bigler going across on an infield out.

The Patriots had great chances in the sixth. Williams got a hit and Mahaffie and Jarosick walked. Miller lined a hot one to Boyne at first and Plank rapped a long one to center, but it was caught.

In the eighth Mahaffie and Bigler singled. Miller hit through short and Mahaffie tallied. Bigler scoring on Jarosick's single.

As an instance of how the "breaks" go against us this is related. With Frederick at bat in the eighth, two out, men on second and third, and two strikes on the batter, one of Bill Stair's spitters went bad, struck in front of the plate and rolled under the stand where Jarosick could not reach it. Both runners scored. Speaking of Frederick's horseshoes!

Mahaffie's work featured the game. His catch of Morrison's long drive to center is said to have been the most spectacular ever made on the Frederick field. He leaped high into the air, speared the ball and held on to it when he fell heavily. The grandstand and bleachers gave him prolonged applause. Several clean throws to the plate also added to his record.

Baptism of Fire Greeted Mr. Harry Mestayer's Entrance In Motion Picture Plays

[Harry Mestayer is one of the most prominent actors on the American stage. He has assumed leading roles in many important stage productions and comes from a line of theatrical people. He has written herewith his experiences as a leading man in the Selig Red Seal play, "The Millionaire Baby."]

By HARRY MESTAYER.

"Two years ago if anyone had approached me with a contract to appear in motion pictures I would have turned down the offer. And yet, like many other actors, I have seen the light. The change of heart was not compulsory, for I came to realize that in motion pictures of higher class the conscientious actor has as great an opportunity for artistic work as on the spoken stage. I considered at some length, too, before I affiliated permanently with any motion picture concern, and I chose the Selig Polyscope company because of the enviable reputation attained by the Selig spectacular productions and the artistic environments made possible by the careful supervision of Mr. William N. Selig.

"When I started to work in 'The Millionaire Baby' in the Chicago studios of the Selig Polyscope company I was also appearing in the lead in a dramatic production on the speaking stage at one of the leading theaters in that city. This placed me under quite a strain and all I did for several weeks was work and sleep—and very little of the latter. I was at the studio every morning at 8:30 and worked steadily until 5 or 5:30 in the afternoon. Then I rushed downtown and, after a rather hurried supper, sped to the theater in time to appear on the stage at 8:15.

"It was quite an experience to be working in two characters which were themselves so different and which to enter the shack. Suddenly, however, the flames leaped up, fanned by a breeze which suddenly swooped down on us, and the other player and myself found that we were within the four walls of a blazing furnace, the door having caught fire, too.

"Our first impulse, naturally, was to make our escape in the quickest manner possible, but both of us realized that if we did it would require the rebuilding of the shack and repeating of the many efforts we had in getting the scene to the point we had reached, so we determined to make an effort to carry out our parts in the gamest manner possible. We rushed through the flames to the door and then with my fellow player I staggered through the door and out in front of the camera, where we both fell exhausted. When I saw the picture I easily understood why the director told us we had done very well, for the way we both sank to the ground was realistic in every detail.

"This scene also called for a rain effect and the water pouring down upon us added to our discomfort. This is merely one incident of the dangers to which a picture player is exposed. I would not have gone through that much in ten years on the stage, but the fact that I now can have my own home and keep regular hours every day more than makes up for all.

"I presume most of my readers know that 'The Millionaire Baby' was adapted to the screen from the story by Anna Katherine Green, and I am sure that those who have read the works of this noted writer will agree with me when I say that her plots are more baffling than those created by any other writer of the present day. There were scenes in the production where the slightest show of any kind of emotion would have disclosed the deaouement and ruined the entire effect of the picture, so you can imagine how I felt at first playing close up to the camera and having to hold every muscle of my face tense when I had been used to being far away from the audience, with the footlights between us, where facial expression is a secondary consideration.

"This is one of the causes for many were presented through such widely different mediums, and this novelty relieved the monotony of such a steady grind.

"I will try to tell you some of the interesting things which occurred during the filming of the big scenes for 'The Millionaire Baby.' The first one that comes to my mind, and one which I will remember for a long, long time, was a fire scene in which I was supposed to rescue another actor, who was playing the part of my employer, from a burning building. Our director tried using smokepots, but these did not give the realistic effect which he desired, so he determined that the shack which had been erected in the large yard of the studio would have to be burned and that the two of us who were to appear in the scene would have to undertake what is termed by the players 'a stunt.' In other words, we would have to run the risk of being injured for the sake of realism.

"The other player was placed in the shack and the fire started. The 'business' of my part called for my rushing into the building and carrying the other man out through the smoke and flames and 'off' the scene. Oil was sprinkled on various parts of the shack, but not around the door through which we were to exit while I was doing the 'rescue.' All appeared to be going nicely as I made my way past the camera and started failures of stage stars when they appear before the camera. They fail to realize that everything they do is recorded by the camera and that a slip which might go unnoticed on the stage will ruin a whole scene in a film drama and possibly spoil the entire production if it is not retaken. One of the most difficult scenes in 'The Millionaire Baby' was the one in which the child is stolen. The skill of handling this so as not to 'kill' the whole story depended more upon the men who re-touched the film after the director had finished with it than upon the players, and I understand that these men worked till the wee small hours several nights in succession.

"Had the players who supported me in this production been other than they were I do not doubt but what my lot would have been anything but an enjoyable one, but as it was we were just like one big family from the very moment we began work. It was this perfect team work in the many trying scenes that gave the film the finished effect which I am sure will prove a delight to audiences wherever it is shown. I have nothing but praise for all the players and the director and, above all, for William N. Selig, the man who is behind the many splendid productions presented by his company, and whose orders to his directors are: 'Make a picture regardless of cost and make one that they will remember.'

A SAFE WAY TO STOP INDIGESTION

The greatest folly of to-day is committed by people with weak, dyspeptic stomachs, who take artificial digesters to cure indigestion.

Your stomach must itself be strong mix its digestive juices with your food. If your stomach isn't strong enough to do this you will keep right on having indigestion and every artificial digester you use will make your stomach weaker.

There is one stomach remedy that every dyspeptic can depend on and that is the famous, old MI-O-NA Stomach Tablets. Most stomach remedies let the stomach rest and digest the food themselves. Mi-o-na succeeds by strengthening and stimulating the stomach and making it do its own digesting. It stops stomach pains, gas, bloating, burning, belching, etc., in ten minutes and does still better by making the flabby, inflamed and inactive stomach walls grow strong and elastic and able to do their own churning. Mi-o-na Tablets never lose their effect and unlike mere artificial digesters, need not be used forever. A few weeks use is generally sufficient to put any stomach in the shape and The People's Drug Store and many other leading druggists hereabouts sell it with that understanding, agreeing to refund money to anyone who does not get complete relief.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—A curious crowd of neighbors invade the mysterious home of Judge Ostrander, county judge and eccentric recluse, following a veiled woman who has gained entrance through the gates of the high double barriers surrounding the place. The woman has disappeared but the judge is found in a cataleptic state. His servant, appears in a dying condition and prevents entrance to a secret door. Bela dies. The judge awakes.

CHAPTER II—Miss Weeks explains to the judge what has occurred during his seizure. He secretly discovers the whereabouts of the veiled woman.

CHAPTER IV.

Unveiled.

On the instant he recognized that no common interview lay before him. She was still the mysterious stranger, and she still wore her veil—a fact all the more impressive that it was no longer the accompaniment of a hat, but flung freely over her bare head. He frowned as he met her eyes through this disguising gauze.

"This is very good of you, Judge Ostrander," she remarked, in a voice both cultured and pleasant. "I could hardly have hoped for this honor. Such consideration shown to a stranger argues a spirit of unusual kindness. Or perhaps I am mistaken in my supposition. Perhaps I am no stranger to you? [Perhaps you know my name?]"

"Averill? No."

She paused, showing her disappointment quite openly. Then drawing up a chair she leaned heavily on its back, saying in low, monotonous tones from which the former eager thrill had departed:

"I see that the intended marriage of your son has made very little impression upon you."

Agitated for the moment, this was such a different topic from the one he expected the judge regarded her in silence before remarking:

"I have known nothing of it. My son's concerns are no longer mine. If you have broken into my course of life for no other purpose than to discuss the affairs of Oliver Ostrander, I must beg of you to excuse me. I have nothing to say in his connection to you or to anyone."

"Is the breach between you so deep as that? I entreat—but no, you are a just man; I will rely upon your sense if right. If your son's happiness fails to appeal to you, let that of a young and innocent girl, lovely as few are lovely, either in body or mind."

"Yourself, madam?"

No, my daughter! Oliver Ostrander has done us that honor, sir. He had every wish and had made every preparation to marry my child, when—Shall I go on?"

"You may."

It was shortly said, but a burden seemed to fall from her shoulders at its utterance. Her whole graceful form relaxed swiftly into its natural curves, and an atmosphere of charm from this moment enveloped her, which justified the description of Mrs. Yardley, even without a sight of the features she still kept hidden.

"I am a widow, sir." Thus she began with studied simplicity. "With my one child I have been living in Detroit these many years—ever since my husband's death, in fact. We are not unlike there, nor have we lacked respect. When some six months ago your son, who stands high in every one's regard, as befits his parentage and his varied talents, met my daughter and fell seriously in love with her, no one so far as I know, criticized his taste or found fault with his choice. I thought my child safe. And she was safe, to all appearance, up to the very morning of her marriage—the marriage of which you say you had received no intimation though Oliver seems a very dutiful son."

"Madam!"—The hoarseness of his tone possibly increased its peremptory character—"I really must ask you to lay aside your veil."

It was a rebuke and she felt it to be so; but though she blushed from behind her veil, she did not remove it.

"Pardon me," she begged, and very humbly, "but I cannot yet. Let me reveal my secret first. Judge Ostrander, the name under which I had lived in Detroit was not my real one. I had let him court and all but marry my daughter, without warning him in any way of what this deception on my part covered. But others—one other, I have reason now to believe—had detected my identity under the altered circumstances of my new life, and surprised him with the news at that late hour. We are—Judge Ostrander, you know who we are. This is not the first time you and I have seen each other face to face." And, lifting up a hand, trembling with emotion, she put aside her veil.

"You recognize me?"

"Too well." The tone was deep with meaning, but there was no accusation in it; nor was there any note of relief. It was more as if some hope deeply, and perhaps unconsciously cherished, had suffered a sudden and complete extinction. "Put back your veil."

Trembling, she complied, murmuring as she fumbled with its folds:

"Disgrace to an Ostrander! I know that I was mad to risk it for a moment. Forgive me for the attempt, and listen to my errand. Oliver was willing to marry my child, even after he knew the shame it would entail. But Reuther would not accept the judge Ostrander, I am not worthy of such a child, but such she is. If John—"

"We will not speak his name," broke in Judge Ostrander, assuming a peremptory bearing quite unlike his former one of dignified reserve. "I should like to hear, instead, your explanation of how my son became involved into an engagement of which you, if no one else, knew the preposterous nature."

"Judge Ostrander, you do right to blame me. I should never have given my consent, never. But I thought our past so completely hidden—our identity so entirely lost under the accepted name of Averill."

"You thought!" He towered over her in his anger. He looked and acted as in the old days, when witnesses covered under his eye and voice. "Say that you knew, madam; that you planned this unholy trap for my son."

"Judge Ostrander, I did not plan this meeting, nor did I at first encourage his addresses. Not till I saw the extent of their mutual attachment did I yield to the event and accept the consequences. But I was wrong, wholly wrong to allow him to visit her a second time; but now that the mischief is done—"

Judge Ostrander was not listening. "I have a question to put you," said he, when he realized that she had ceased speaking. "Oliver was never a fool. When he was told who your daughter was what did he say of the coincidence which made him the lover of the woman against whose father his father had uttered sentence of death? Didn't he marvel and call it extraordinary—the work of the devil?"

"Possibly; but if he did it was not in any conversation he had with me."

"And your daughter? Was he as close-mouthed in speaking of me to her as he was to you?"

"I have no doubt of it. Reuther betrays no knowledge of you or of your habits, and has never expressed but one curiosity in your regard. As you can imagine what that is, I will not mention it."

"You are at liberty to. I have listened to much and can well listen to a little more."

"Judge, she is of a very affectionate nature, and her appreciation of your son's virtues is very great. Though her conception of yourself is naturally a very vague one, it is only to be expected that she should wonder how you could live so long without a visit from Oliver."

His lips took a strange twist. There was self-contempt in it, and some other very peculiar and contradictory emotion. But when this semblance of a smile had passed it was no longer Oliver's father she saw before her, but the county judge. Even his tone partook of the change as he dryly remarked:

"What you have told me concerning your daughter and my son is very interesting. But it was not for the simple purpose of informing me at this untoward engagement was at an end that you came to Shelby. You have another purpose. What is it? I can remain with you just five minutes longer."

Five minutes! It only takes one to kill a hope, but five are far too few for the reconstruction of one. But she gave no sign of her secret doubts, as she plunged at once into her subject.

"I will be brief," said she; "as brief as any mother can be who is pleading for her daughter's life as well as happiness. Reuther has no real ailment, but her constitution is abnormally weak, and she will die of this grief if some miracle does not save her. Strong as her will is, determined as she is to do her duty at all cost, she has very little physical stamina. See! Here is her photograph, taken but a short time ago. Look at it, I beg. See what she was like when life was full of hope; and then imagine her with all hope eliminated."

"Excuse me. What use? I can do nothing. I am very sorry for the child, but—" His very attitude showed his disinclination to look at the picture.

But she would not be denied. She thrust it upon him and once his eyes had fallen upon it, they clung there, though evidently against his will. Ah, she knew that Reuther's exquisite countenance would plead for itself! God seldom grants to such beauty so lovely a spirit. If the features themselves failed to appeal, certainly he must feel the charm of an expression which had already netted so many hearts. Breathlessly she watched him, and, as she watched, she noted the heavy lines carved in his face by thought and possibly by sorrow, slowly relax and his eyes fill with a wistful tenderness.

"Parents must learn to endure bitterness. I have not been exempt myself from such. Your child will not die. You have years of mutual companionship before you, while I have nothing. And now let us end this interview, so painful to us both. You have said—"

"No," she broke in with sudden vehemence, all the more startling from the restraint in which she had held herself up to this moment, "I have not said—I have not begun to say what sees like a consuming fire in my breast. I spoke of a miracle—will you not catch, judge? I am not wild; I am not unconscious of presumption. I am only in earnest, in deadly earnest. A miracle is possible. The gulf between these two may yet be spanned. I see a way—"

What change was this to which she had suddenly become witness? The face which had not lost all its underlying benignity even when it looked its coldest, had now become settled and hard. His manner was absolutely repellent as he broke in with the quick disclaimer:

"But there is no way. What miracle could ever make your daughter, lovely as she undoubtedly is, a fitting match for my son! None, madam, absolutely none. Such an alliance would be monstrous; unnatural."

"Why?" The word came out boldly "Because her father died the death of a criminal?"

The answer was equally blunt. "Yes; a criminal over whose trial his father presided as judge."

Quick as a flash, however, came the retort.

"A judge, however, who showed him every consideration possible. I was told at the time and I have been assured by many since that you were more than just to him in your rulings."

"I Can Well Listen to a Little More."

Judge Ostrander—he had taken a step toward the hall door; but he paused at this utterance of his name—"answer me this one question. Why did you do this? You must have hated him deeply—your feeling for Mr. Etheridge was well known. Then why such magnanimity toward the man who stood on trial for killing him?"

Unaccustomed to be questioned, though living in an atmosphere of continual yes and no, he stared at the veiled features of one who so dared, as if he found it hard to excuse such presumption. But he answered her nevertheless, and with decided emphasis:

"Possibly because his victim was my friend and lifelong companion. A judge fears his own prejudices."

"Possibly; but you had another reason, judge; a reason which justified you in your own eyes at the time and which justifies you in mine now and always. Am I not right? This is no courtroom; the case is one of the past; it can never be reopened; the prisoner is dead. Answer me, then, as one sorrowing mother replies to another, hadn't you another reason?"

The judge, panicked though he was or thought he was, against all conceivable attack, winced at this repetition of a question he had hoped to ignore, and in his anxiety to hide this involuntary betrayal of weakness allowed his anger to have full vent, as he cried out in no measured terms:

"What is the meaning of all this? What are you after? Why are you raking up these by-gones, which only make the present condition of affairs darker and more hopeless? Oliver Ostrander, under no circumstances and by means of no sophistries, can ever marry the daughter of John Scoville. I should think you would see that for yourself."

"But if John should be proved to have suffered wrongfully? If he should be shown to have been innocent?"

His rebuke was quick, instant. With a force and earnestness which recalled the courtroom he replied:

"Madam, your hopes and wishes have misled you. Your husband was a guilty man; as guilty a man as any judge ever passed sentence upon."

"But he swore the day I last visited him in the prison, with his arms pressed tight about me and his eye looking straight into mine as you are looking now, that he never struck that blow. I did not believe him then; there were too many dark spots in my memory of old lies premeditated and destructive of my happiness; but I believed him later, and I believe him now."

"Madam, this is quite unprofitable. A jury of his peers condemned him as guilty and the law compelled me to pass sentence upon him. The inevitable must be accepted. I have said my last word."

"But not heard mine," she panted. "For me to acknowledge the inevitable where my daughter's life and happiness are concerned would make me seem a coward in my own eyes. Helped or unhelped, with the sympathy or without the sympathy of one who I hoped would show himself my friend, I shall proceed with the task to which I have dedicated myself. You will forgive me, judge. You see that John's last declaration of innocence goes further with me than your belief, backed as it is by the full weight of the law."

"Guilt as her as in one gone suddenly demented, he said:

"I fail to understand you, Mrs.—I will call you Mrs. Averill. You speak of a task. What task?"

"The only one I have a heart for—the proving that Reuther is not the child of a willful murderer; that another man did the deed for which he suffered. I can do it. I feel confident that I can do it; and if you will not help me—"

"Help you! After what I have said and reiterated that he is guilty, guilty, guilty?"

Advancing upon her with each repetition of the word, he towered before her, an imposing, almost formidable figure. She faced again his anger, which might well be righteous, and with almost preternatural insight boldly declared:

"You are too vehement to quite convince me, Judge Ostrander. Acknowledge it or not, there is more doubt than certainty in your mind; a doubt which ultimately will lead you to help me. Then my way should broaden—a way, at the end of which I see a united couple—my daughter and your son. Oh, she is worthy of him," the woman broke forth, as he made another repellent and imperative gesture, "ask anyone in the town where we have lived."

Abruptly and without apology for his rudeness, Judge Ostrander turned his back, then with a quick whirl about which brought him face to face with her once more, he impetuously asked:

"Madam, you were in my house this morning. You came in through the gate which Bela had left unlocked. Will you explain how you came to do this? Did you know that he was going down street, leaving the way open behind him? Was there collusion between you?"

Her eyes looked clearly into his. She felt that she had nothing to disguise or conceal.

"I had urged him to do this, Judge Ostrander. I had met him more than once in the street when he went out to do your errands, and I used all my persuasion to induce him to give me this one opportunity of pleading my cause with you. He was your devoted servant, he showed it in his death, but he never got over his affection for Oliver. I had listened to what folks said. I had heard that you would receive nobody; talk to nobody. Bela was my only resource."

He was scrutinizing her keenly, and for the first time understandingly. Whatever her station, past or present, she was certainly no ordinary woman, nor was her face without beauty, fit as it was by passion and every other of which a young woman is capable. No man would be likely to resist it unless his armor were twice forged. Would he himself be able to? He began to experience a cold fear—a dread which drew a black veil over the future; a blacker veil than that which had hitherto rested upon it.

But his face showed nothing. He proceeded, with a piercing intensity not to be withstood:

"When you entered my house this morning did you come directly to my room?"

"Yes, Bela told me just how to reach it."

"And when you saw me indisposed—unable, in fact, to greet you—what did you do then?"

With the force and meaning of one who takes an oath, she brought her hand, palm downward on the table before her, as she steadily replied:

"I flew back into the room through which I had come, undecided whether to fly the house or wait for what might happen to you. I did not dare to go till Bela came back. So I stayed watching in a dark corner of that same room. I never left it till the crowd came in. Then I slid out behind them."

"Was the child with you—at your side I mean, all this time?"

"I never let go her hand."

"Woman, you are keeping nothing back?"

"Nothing but my terror at the sight of Bela running in all bloody to escape the people pressing after him."

Sincerity was in her manner and in her voice. The judge breathed more easily, and made the remark:

"No one with hearing unimpaired can realize the suspicion of the deaf, nor can anyone who is not subject to attacks like mine conceive the doubts with which a man so cursed views those who have been active about him while the world to him was blank."

Thus he dismissed the present subject, to surprise her by a renewal of the old one.

"What are your reasons," said he, for the hopes you have just expressed? I think it your duty to tell me before we go any further."

"Excuse me for tonight. What I have to tell—or rather, what I have to show you—requires daylight." Then, as she became conscious of his astonishment, added falteringly:

"Have you any objection to meeting me tomorrow on the bluff overlooking Dark?"

The judge was looking at her; he had not moved; nor had an eyelash stirred, but the rest of that sentence had stuck in her throat, and she found herself standing as immovably quiet as he.

"Why there?" he asked.

"Because"—her words came slowly, haltingly, as she tremulously, almost fearfully, felt her way with him—"because—there is no other place—where—I can made—my point."

He smiled. It was his first smile in years and naturally was a little constrained—and, to her eyes at least, almost more terrifying than his frown.

"Why have you waited till now?" he called out, forgetful that they were not alone in the house, forgetful, apparently, of everything but his surprise and repulsion. "Why not have made use of this point before it was too late? You were at your husband's even on the witness

She nodded, thoroughly cowed at last both by his indignation and the revelation contained in this question of the judicial mind—"Why now, when the time was then?"

Happily, she had an answer.

"Judge Ostrander, I had a reason for that, too; and, like my point, it is a good one. But do not ask me for it tonight. Tomorrow I will tell you everything. But it will have to be in the place I have mentioned. Will you come to the bluff where the ruins are one-half hour before sunset? Please be exact as to the time. You will see why, if you come."

He leaned across the table—they were on opposite sides of it—plunging his eyes into hers, then drew back, and remarked with an aspect of gloom but with much less the appearance of distrust:

"A very odd request, madam. I hope you have good reason for it," adding, "I bury Bela tomorrow and the cemetery is in this direction. I will meet you where you say and at the hour you name."

And, regarding him closely as he spoke, she saw that for all the correctness of his manner and the bow of respectful courtesy with which he instantly withdrew, that deep would be his anger and unquestionable the results to her if she failed to satisfy him at this meeting of the value of her point in reawakening justice and changing public opinion.

PLANT FOOD SUPPLY

WAR DEMANDS A GREATER SUPPLY FROM THE AMERICAN PLANTER.

It is of the utmost importance that a soil should contain those elements found in the plant; hence, it is almost self-evident that a fertile soil must contain a maximum quantity of those particular elements or constituents which are removed from the soil in maximum amounts by the crops grown and by this constant removal, it brings the soil to a low point of fertility, which makes prolific cropping impossible.

The planters future progress depends—How well he is going to restore fertility to the soil. In order to conserve the soil, you must maintain its fertility. In drawing together the raw material to create our brands, it is done with the idea to help the planter to build up soil fertility. The content of High Grade materials in our brands will build up your soil fertility with correct farming methods, and bring you quick returns for the money invested.

The influence of fertilizer is perhaps greater than any other factor in determining the profit that may be derived from the farm. Its influence is felt not only in the quantity of seed produced, but in the quality of the products derived from it. A specific fertilizer possesses certain capabilities, the value of which are dependent on selecting the Raw Materials to produce Pure Plant Food. By selecting is meant not only that the fertilizer should contain a sufficient amount of nutrient in the right proportions, but also that the materials furnishing the nutrient should be clean and free from any substance that may injure the growing plant or the quality of the product.

Farmers should realize when buying food for the plant that the value of the fertilizer depends on the material brought together to form the Plant Food.

Our Guarantees of analysis, and the constituent elements of the Fertilizers we offer can be implicitly relied upon. We use only the Best and Purest Materials at our factory. We invite comparison of our grades with other Brands. The verdict of the soil, the final and most important test, will sustain our claims. Give us a trial and save money.

ITALIANS DRIVE AUSTRIANS BACK

Vigorous Offensive Repulsed With Heavy Losses.

A MOVE TO SAVE GORZ

The Violent Bombardment of Malborghetto Continues, With Teutons Resisting Vigorously.

Rome, June 25.—According to information from Verona, the Austrians have received such reinforcements as to enable them to take the offensive throughout the front, but are constantly being repulsed everywhere with heavy loss.

The violent bombardment of Malborghetto, which the Italians must take in their advance on the railway center at Villach, continues, according to advices from the front. The Austrians are resisting bitterly, especially the Honved detachments.

The arrival of Austrian reinforcements stopped the Italian advance at Caporetto, but they have not gone back across the Isonzo.

Thirty thousand Austrians who de-bouches from the Tervena forest, are marching against positions north of Gorz.

Southeast of Flitsch strong Austrian forces sought to drive back the Italians, who gave way before superior numbers and retired as far as the frontier, where they concealed themselves in a forest and allowed the Austrians to pass.

When the Austrians were installed in the Italian positions the Italians opened a murderous machine gun fire, killing over 400 of their adversaries and forcing the rest out of their positions.

Archduke Eugene of Austria, commander in chief of the Austro-Hungarian forces operating against Italy, has reorganized two army corps, with an active strength of 50,000 officers and men, designed for mountain warfare, according to information received through military circles.

An official statement issued at the headquarters of the general staff of the Italian army says:

"Along the entire front there has been an artillery duel between pieces of heavy and medium caliber. The enemy endeavored Wednesday night to attack particularly Montebello, Val Grande, Val Piccolo, Cresmaverz (situated between Pizzocollina and Zellendorf) and Crestaverde, which has been occupied by our troops.

"During the night of June 21-22 and continuing the following day the enemy made three desperate attacks against our position at Frenkofel. All these attacks were repulsed successfully by the splendid fire of our artillery and the use of hand grenades. The enemy left 200 bodies on the battlefield.

BETHLEHEM EMPLOYS 14,173

Monthly Pay Roll Aggregates $770,000 and is Expected to Reach $1,000,000.

South Bethlehem, Pa., June 25.—According to figures obtained here, the Bethlehem Steel company is employing at its Saucon and Lehigh plants 13,173 men and 1000 more at the war munitions plant at Redington. The pay roll now is $700,000 a month.

When the new $60,000 shell loading plant at Redington is built 1000 more persons will be employed there, and when the new merchant mill at the South Bethlehem plant it put in operation next August 3000 more men will be given work.

Before fall it is expected that the steel company will have in its employ between 18,000 and 20,000 persons, who will draw $1,000,000 monthly in wages.

NUNS AND NURSES KILLED AT ARRAS

Hospital is Target of Germans During Bombardment.

Paris, June 25.—The French war office issued a statement on the progress of hostilities, which reads as follows:

"In the region to the north of Arras Wednesday night passed relatively calmly, if we except the territory to the north of Sonchez, where the cannonading never ceased.

"The enemy bombarded Arras, the Hospital of the Holy Sacrament being particularly damaged. Some sisters and some of the nurses lost their lives.

"In front of Dompierre, to the west of Peronne, the explosion of a German mine was followed by a violent bombardment of our trenches. An attack on the part of the enemy, executed by a not numerous force, was easily checked by us.

"On the heights of the Meuse, at the Calonne trench, there has been no change in the situation. We are still maintaining our positions in a portion of the second German line.

"In Lorraine, not far from Leclercq, the enemy delivered a counter attack. After a rather spirited engagement they were repulsed.

"The number of prisoners made since June 1 in the region of the Pech river now amounts to 25 officers, 55 under officers and 638 men."

GERMANS TO ORGANIZE

Plan to Block Shipment of Arms to the Allies.

Cleveland, June 25.—Cleveland Germans have received copies of a call issued in Detroit and Toledo for a meeting of representatives of German, Austrian and Hungarian social fraternal and political organizations throughout the country to form a political association with the object of forcing the United States government to put a stop to the sale of arms and munitions to Germany's foes.

The call was issued by the Deutschschubund, of Detroit, Emil G. Albrecht, president, and the German Historical society, of Toledo; Dr. Bernhard Becker, of Detroit. Cleveland Germans say that most of the German organizations in Cleveland will be represented.

The formal call says that the German-American citizens "know well enough that the United States has the formal right to export arms and ammunition to the allies," but that on moral grounds and "in the name of humanity," an embargo should be put on such exports.

73 Died in Attacks on England.

London, June 25.—The casualties in the bombardment of Hartlepool, Scarborough and Whitby some time ago by hostile warships were seventeen killed and 567 injured. Under Secretary Brace announced in the house of commons. He stated that fourteen attacks, chiefly against undefended towns, caused the death of fifty-six persons, 24 men, 21 women and 11 children, and the wounding of 38, of whom 35 were women and 17 children.

GRIDDLECAKES.

BREAKFAST MENU.
Stewed Prunes.
Sour Milk Griddlecakes.
Buttered Toast.
Tea, Coffee or Milk.

SOUR Milk Griddlecakes.—Mix one egg, well beaten, with one cupful sour milk, half teaspoonful soda, quarter teaspoonful salt and cupful and a quarter of flour. Drop spoonful by spoonful on hot griddle. Brown well on one side. When puffed full of bubbles and cooked on edges turn and cook on the other side.

Other Recipes.

Soft Shell Crabs.—Clean crabs and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Dip in eggs and crumbs. Fry in deep fat and drain. They will rise to the top while frying and should be turned. Serve with tartare sauce.

To Clean a Crab.—Lift and fold back the tapering points which are found on each side of the back shell. Remove spongy substance that lies under them. Turn crab on back and with a pointed knife remove the small piece at the lower part of the shell which ends in a point.

Banana Cream Cake.—Reduce two or three ripe bananas to a fine pulp. Add a few drops of lemon juice and sweeten to taste. Just before serving add the stiffly beaten white of an egg. Serve in punch cups or small stem glasses with a candied cherry and a dash of grated nuts.

Asparagus Salad.—Drain and rinse stalks of canned asparagus. Cut a few rings from a bright red pepper. Place three or four stalks of asparagus through each ring. Arrange on lettuce leaves and serve with French dressing.

Dandelions.—Wash thoroughly, remove roots and drain. Cook one hour, or until tender. In a small quantity of salted boiling water. Season with butter, salt and pepper. Serve with vinegar.

Pulled Bread.—Remove crusts from a loaf of freshly baked bread. Pull the bread apart until the pieces are the desired size and length. This is best done by using forks. Cook in a slow oven until pieces are delicately brown.

Charming Recipes—One hundred articles in halves lengthwise. Spread thinly with butter. Sprinkle with grated cheese, seasoned with salt and pepper. Bake until delicately browned.

COAT FOR MOTORING OR TRAVELING.

For motoring, traveling or general service wear there is nothing smarter than this coat of brown homespun.

Whether she goes in for out-door sports, motoring or simply needs a coat for general wear the woman of fashion will appreciate this model in a modish shade of homespun. A decided novelty is featured in the trimming straps that start at the shoulder seam in front and are carried down below the belt to form a pocket. Both edges of the straps are stitched on to the coat above the belt, but at the waist-line they are unattached between indicating perforations, and through this space the belt is passed. The upper edge of the pockets are free for opening. The average size requires 4 1/2 yards 54-inch material to develop.

Although it is an exceptionally trim-looking model, the coat is not difficult to either cut or make. As a preliminary to the cutting the material is first carefully folded and weighted, if necessary, so that it will not "creep." Then the sleeve is placed into position first, about two inches from the edge of the goods. Opposite the sleeve is laid the strap and pocket section. To the right of the sleeve the back is laid, on a lengthwise fold of the homespun. The cuff comes next; then the collar sections, said sections being laid crosswise of material. Lastly are put into place the front and belt, the front on a lengthwise thread and the belt crosswise the homespun.

The home dressmaker who fears that she will not be able to do justice to the straps may retain pockets and omit straps by cutting off the front edge of pocket on line of double small "v" perforations.

The corded silks are so much in demand this season that the coat would be very dressy developed in one of the fashionable weaves. For cool days it may be buttoned close up to the throat, while on warm days the front can be turned back, leaving perfectly formed revers and a modish collar.

Hats to accompany the new long coats are usually made of the same material. Homespun models are trimmed with silk bows, bands, rosettes and other ornaments that stand rough wear, but which are chic in effect.

Pictorial Review Coat No. 6271. Sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

Easy To Darken

Your Gray Hair

You can Bring Back Color and Lustre with Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look

For Agonizing Corns You Can't Beat It

Certainly not, "Putnam's" has 'em all beat a mile. It's a marvel on corns and foot lumps, acts like magic. Why for nearly fifty years Putnam's Extractor has been the standard remedy, the dependable one, the sure kind that never disappoints.

It's painless, too. Think of it! Faint it on to-night, in the morning the pain is all gone.

Small wonder the sale of Putnam's Corn Extractor is so large, 25c. at dealers everywhere.

The Power of Sympathy
By ESTHER VANDEVEER

When the Spanish-American war broke out Ralph and Edgar Townsend, brothers, enlisted in the same regiment of sharpshooters and were assigned to the same company. One day they were out on the picket line sniping for the Spaniards. Their position was behind a stone wall, its continuity broken here and there. Ralph was on one side of a gap, while Edgar was on the other side, the opening between them being eight or ten yards. Edgar concluded to make a dash to join his brother. He had passed safely over all but a couple of yards of the distance when Ralph saw a Spanish sharpshooter taking aim at his brother. Ralph had just emptied his piece or he would have shot the Spaniard. As it was, he sprang between him and Edgar and received a shot which, grazing the spine, paralyzed his lower limbs. He was discharged from the service and sent home, where he submitted to an operation that partly restored his locomotive powers, but he was in a measure crippled for life.

As soon as the war was over Edgar Townsend rejoined his brother, resolving to devote the rest of his life to him. Ralph was twenty years old, Edgar twenty-two. Ralph would not admit that he was crippled and was very sensitive at the mention of his being so. As for Edgar making any change whatever in his life's plans on his account he would not hear of it, nor did Ralph seem to realize that he had sacrificed himself for his brother. He considered what he had done simply in the line of his duty as a soldier. Edgar, on the contrary, was impressed with the idea that his brother had taken a burden which he should have borne himself.

Nevertheless as soon as Edgar saw that Ralph was averse to such an interpretation of the status between them, he refrained from any mention of it, and wherever it was possible to conceal any sacrifice he made for his brother he did so. He soon came to studying Ralph's wishes, and wherever they conflicted with his own, made pretense that what Ralph wanted was distasteful to him.

Then came Edith Payne into the lives of the brothers. She was sympathetic with Ralph, but her heart went out to Edgar. The one she loved as one who needed her; the other she loved as one she needed. Edgar, noting that his brother was daily growing more dependent on her, refrained from paying her any marked attention.

As time went on Edgar perceived that Edith was growing to be a necessity to Ralph. Moreover, he noticed that while Edith was devoted to Ralph, there were indications that her heart was setting toward himself. One day when he and Edith were speaking of Ralph Edgar said to her:

"I feel it my duty to say to you, Edith, that I have seen what perhaps has passed unnoticed by you. Ralph loves you."

The girl paled, and she had cause to pale. She loved Edgar and she knew that while his brother held this view, Edgar was lost to her. He would never stand between his brother and her.

"I hope," she said presently, "that you are mistaken."

"And I hope," said Edgar, "if you think you cannot respond, that you are mistaken. Our attentions to those dependent upon us often draw us to them with far greater force than we realize."

Edith sighed. She knew that the man she loved was endeavoring to persuade her to give herself to the man she only pitied. But she said nothing more. She knew what Edgar would have her do. She did not know his feelings toward her, but she surmised that he had no desire to possess her himself. Even if he had he would give her up to his brother.

Soon after this brief dialogue Edgar went away for a time, leaving Edith and Ralph together. Before his departure he said to Edith, "I hope when I return to find that you have decided to make Ralph happy."

It was thus that Edith was led to bear a part of the burden of the man she loved by giving herself to the man she did not love. She considered what he had said to her a command, and she would not disobey. When Edgar returned she told him that she and Ralph were engaged.

She looked Edgar in the eye when she made the announcement, hoping to see him wince. If it was a shock to him he concealed it so well that she was deceived. From that time she gave herself up more and more to Ralph's companionship, and when the wedding day came went with him to the altar a martyr.

Then Edgar, feeling that his brother no longer needed him as before, spent much of his time away from him. Some said he did not dare trust himself near his brother's wife.

As the years sped on Ralph Townsend grew more and more helpless, his wife more and more devoted to him. Ten years after his marriage he died. Those who knew of the sacrifice that had been made supposed that Edith and Edgar would quickly come together. They have been disappointed. Four years after Edith became a widow she and Edgar had not married. It is said that she illustrates Edgar's words to her years before, "Our attentions to those dependent upon us often draw us to them with far greater force than we realize."

Edgar is still a bachelor.

Rheumatism In Joints
Pain Disappears and Swelling Vanishes in a Few Days.
That is what happens if you use Rheuma, the wonderful remedy that The People's Drug Store and all druggists sell on the "money back if not cured" plan. There is a vast amount of rheumatism in this vicinity, and if you know any sufferer, call his attention to this generous offer.
Rheuma is a quick-acting prescription. You will know your rheumatism is leaving 24 hours after you take the first dose. It dissolves the uric acid and drives it from its lodging place. Mrs. Alice A. Brown, Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "For seven years I suffered greatly with rheumatism in my hip; at night I was scarcely able to sleep. One bottle of Rheuma cured me." That sounds miraculous, but Rheuma does miraculous things. Fifty cents a bottle.
